PATTERSON APPOINTED VISITING PROFESSOR OF LAW AT UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI

Dr. Edwin W. Patterson, emeritus Cardozo Professor of Jurisprudence at Columbia University School of Law and one of America's most celebrated authorities in his field, has been appointed visiting distinguished professor of law at the University of Missouri for a part of the coming Winter Semester.

Dean Covington announced that Professor Patterson, who holds three degrees from Missouri including an honorary doctorate, will give a series of lectures and seminars in law classes here in the early spring of 1962. He will also be available for consultation with members of the faculty and students during his weeks on the campus, Dean Covington said.

"We are extremely fortunate and proud to get a man of Dr. Patterson's qualities and reputation to teach some of our classes in law here," Dean Covington said. "We are grateful to him for taking time from his research and writing to join the faculty of his alma mater."

Professor Patterson was born in Kansas City and graduated from Central High School there. He received his A.B. degree from the University of Missouri in 1909, and his LL.B. degree in 1911. He also received the

S.J.D. degree from Harvard in 1920, and was awarded an honorary LL.D. degree by the University here in 1936.

He practiced law in Kansas City for several years after graduating here, then entered the teaching profession, serving on the faculties of the University of Texas, the University of Colorado, and the State University of Iowa before going to Columbia University in 1922.

Dr. Patterson was named Cardozo professor at Columbia in 1945. He retired from full-time teaching and became Professor Emeritus in 1957, and now makes his home in Charlottesville, Va., doing research and writing. He is giving a series of special lectures at Columbia University this fall.

Widely recognized as an authority on laws of contracts and of insurance, he is author, co-author, or editor of many published works in these fields. His volume, "Jurisprudence: Men and Ideas of the Law," published in 1953, was the first general treatise on jurisprudence by an American legal writer. The book gave an insight into the philosophy and culture of the legal profession by giving an objective analysis of the important jurisprudential theories which have been, and are, most influential on the legal system.

Together with the late professor John Dewey, one of America's most distinguished philosophers, Prof. Patterson established a seminar in legal philosophy at Columbia University which has continued to be popular. Many of its students have become teachers in American law schools.

Dr. Patterson delivered the first Earl F. Nelson Memorial Lecture in law when that series was established here at the University in 1954.

Dr. Patterson has served as visiting professor of law at the universities of Texas, Virginia, and Southern California, and taught during a summer session at Stanford University. He is a member of numerous honor societies, and during his student days here was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and Order of the Coif, national honor societies, and was a member of Phi Delta Phi, professional law fraternity.

Robert L. Howard Retires

Professor Robert L. Howard reached retirement age at the end of the 1960-61 school year, and was named Professor Emeritus of Law at the June Commencement program.

Professor Howard received the A.B., M.A., and LL.B. degrees from the University of Missouri, and the S.J.D. degree from Harvard Law School. He was an instructor in Political Science at the University of Missouri from 1920 to 1922. In 1925 he joined the

Law Day 1962

Dean Covington has announced that Law Day 1962 will be held Saturday, April 28. The Alumni Dinner will be on Friday night, and the picnic will be at noon on Saturday. All alumni and friends of the Law School are invited. Professor Patterson will be the speaker at the Edna Nelson dinner for members of the Law Review and the first year law students on Friday night.

Robert A. Leflar, Distinguished Professor of Law of the University of Arkansas, will deliver the speech at the Annual Banquet Saturday night. Professor Leflar is former dean of the University of Arkansas Law School, and a former judge on the Supreme Court of Arkansas. He was on the faculty of the University of Missouri in 1936-37.

TWO NEW VISITING PROFESSORS

FACULTY NOTES

The Law School faculty is now settled in the new offices in the new wing of Tate Hall, and has been busy with writing and research.

Professor Fratcher devoted much of the summer to the preparation of the 1961 pocket parts for Simes and Smith on Future Interests, the standard four volume treatise on the subject. During August he served on active duty in the grade of Colonel as Special Assistant to The Judge Advocate General of the Army at Washington, D.C. Professor Fratcher published an article on Trusts and Succession in Missouri in the January, 1962, number of the Missouri Law Review. His duties as chairman of the University of Missouri Civil Defense Committee have taken much of his time in recent months, and he is a member of several American Bar Association committees.

Professor Gerard published a survey of Missouri Insurance law during the past year in the January issue of the Missouri Law Review. The June issue contained his book review of Insurance and Public Policy by Kimball. He is to be the honorary initiate of Phi Delta Phi Legal Fraternity, and the faculty adviser to the fraternity.

Professor Lowe is the author of a survey on the subject of Taxation in the January issue of the Missouri Law Review. Recently he participated as moderator of one session of the Tax Institute in Kansas City.

Professor Divilbus is the author of a survey of Missouri Procedure and Practice in the January issue of the Missouri Law Review.

Professor Murphy recently addressed the University's debate group, giving them background information on labor unions and the anti-trust laws, this year's national debate topic. He also addressed the Law Wives this fall. He is working currently on two book reviews, to be published this spring.

Professor McCleary is the author of a survey of Torts in Missouri appearing in the January issue of the Missouri Law Review.

Professors Eckhardt and Peterson, whose two-volume Missouri Legal Forms was published in 1960, are currently at work preparing pocket parts to bring these volumes down to date, to take care of legislative changes made in 1961. Professor Eckhardt, who taught at the University of

George W. Stengel

George W. Stengel, visiting professor of law, is a native of Ohio. He holds his B.B.A. from Ohio State University; a J.D. from University of Michigan Law School; and an LL.M. from Harvard Law School.

Professor Stengel was an accountant with Arthur Young & Co. and the War Department for two years. He has taught one year at the University of Idaho Law School; three years at the University of Miami Law School; and three years at George Washington University Law School. From 1954 to 1961 he practiced law in Troy and Dayton, Ohio.

Professor Stengel is teaching the courses formerly taught by Professor Anderson, who is now on a sabbatical leave doing graduate work. These courses include Remedies and Conflict of Laws.

William P. Murphy, visiting professor of law, is a native of Memphis, Tennessee. He holds a B.A. from

William P. Murphy

Southwestern University in Memphis; an LL.B. from the University of Virginia where he was Order of the Coif, and a J.S.D. from Yale Law School.

Professor Murphy was in private practice for one year, after which he was an attorney for the U.S. Department of Labor from 1950 to 1953. He was law clerk to U.S. Circuit Judge John D. Martin, 1949-50. Since 1953 he has been on the faculty of the University of Mississippi School of Law. He has been a visiting professor of law at Duke University Law School and the University of Kentucky Law School, and at the University of Missouri Law School for the summer, 1960.

Professor Murphy is teaching Constitutional Law, Labor Law, and Administrative Law—the courses taught by Professor Emeritus Robert L. Howard before his retirement last June.

Southern California at Los Angeles during the summer session, is also currently writing a review of the 1960-61 cases on Property Law for the Missouri Law Review.

HOWARD RETIRES

Law School faculty and served continuously since that time, a period of 36 years.

Professor Howard is much loved by his former students, who have established a fund in his honor in the law school.

Since 1946 he has been a member of the Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, and his work as a commissioner has been noteworthy. He is nationally known for his work in labor law and constitutional law. With a group of law professors he edited a case book on labor law which is used in many law schools. He has also been very active in the work of the Missouri Bar and the American Bar Association.

Missouri Law Review Plans Special Issues

Future issues of the Missouri Law Review should be of special interest to Missouri lawyers. The current November issue is a memorial to the late Senator Thomas Hennings. As has been the custom, the January issue will be a survey of the work of the Missouri Supreme Court during 1961. Also, it is planned that the June issue will contain a symposium on Domestic Relations.

Professor Anderson Granted Sabbatical Leave

Professor Edmond P. Anderson, Jr. is on leave of absence from the Law School during the current year. Professor Anderson, who teaches the courses in Remedies, Conflict of Laws, Sales, and Trade Regulation, received a fellowship at Columbia University School of Law and is doing graduate work in law there.

New Tate Hall Courtroom Used for Mock Trials

Circuit Judge George Adams of Mexico, Missouri presided as Professor Divilbus's trial practice class held a full-length mock trial in the Tate Hall Courtroom the evening of December 8. Townspeople sat as members of the jury, while members of the trial practice class divided the various responsibilities of counsel. It was estimated that more than 200 persons were present to see the trial of a replevin action for the return of a strand of valuable pearls, allegedly given to the plaintiff by the defendant's late mother shortly before her death.

Judge Norwin D. Houser, Commissioner of the Supreme Court of Missouri, presided at the second trial, held January 5, 1962. This trial was a personal injury action, arising out of a rear-end automobile collision, and involving a corporate defendant. Again the new courtroom was filled, as the trial was well-attended.

The courtroom was also used recently by the Air Force R.O.T.C. Department, to put on a mock special court martial for its advanced cadets. Professor Hunvald advised the Air Force instructors, and several law students attended.

Visiting Professor For Summer Session

Professor Charles L. Crum of the University of North Dakota Law School taught the course in Conveyances during the 1961 summer session. Professor Crum received the Ph.B. and LL.B. degrees from the University of North Dakota in 1950. While a law student, he was Editor-in-chief of the Student Editorial Board of the North Dakota Bar Briefs. Upon graduation, he joined the faculty. He received the LL.M. degree in 1955 from Columbia University. Many students will remember him as an excellent chess player, and the faculty members are grateful for his donation of a chair to the faculty lounge upon his return to the University of North Dakota at the end of the summer session. Professor Crum replaced Professor Eckhardt, who taught the summer session at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Law Day 1961

Over 700 persons attended Law Day 1961 on April 29. There was special interest in this law day because the new wing on Tate Hall was dedicated. The dedicatory speech was made by Senator Symington. Governor John M. Dalton, class of 1923, presented the building to James Finch, class of 1932, Chairman of the Board of Curators. The weather was fair and the noon picnic luncheon was held on the lawn of the University Library across from Tate Hall.

One of the highlights of the law day was the 25th anniversary meeting of the class of 1936. This class added almost $2,000 to the James Parks Memorial Fund, and an annual scholarship will be awarded by the Foundation from the fund. This scholarship will be $300.

Another highlight of Law Day was the student skit, which was a mock faculty meeting, sung to the tune of H.M.S. Pinafore by Gilbert and Sullivan.

The speaker at the Annual Banquet was Dean William Prosser of the University of California, famed authority on torts, and one of the draftsmen of the Uniform Commercial Code. The Edna Nelson dinner was held on Friday evening, with the Law Review editors and the first year law students as guests of the Law School Foundation. Dean Page Keeton of the University of Texas Law School, President of the Association of American Law Schools was the speaker.

It seems that great interest is being shown in the 25th anniversary of each class and it is expected that the class of 1937 will have a good attendance at Law Day 1962.

Placement News

Opportunities continue to be good for graduates of the Law School, according to Dean Covington. Quite a few of the 1961 graduating class had jobs before graduation. By the time they were admitted to the bar all were employed, and some openings remain unfilled.

More and more law firms are coming to Columbia to interview students. Already some interviews have been held this fall for members of the class of 1962.

Two factors will have a great effect on this year's job situation. The number of graduates will be relatively small. Fifteen are scheduled to graduate in February; 33 in June; and 4 in August. On these, quite a few will have to fulfill their military obligation before beginning their practice.

Alumni Luncheon

The annual alumni luncheon was held in Kansas City at noon on Friday, September 22, during the Annual Meeting of the Missouri Bar Association. Two hundred seventy-five persons were served before the management stopped selling tickets. President Ellis and Dean Covington spoke to the group, telling them of developments at the University and the Law School. This was a record crowd of alumni indicates great interest by the alumni in their law school.

Freedom of Information Conference

The Missouri Bar, the School of Law, and the School of Journalism jointly sponsored a Freedom of Information Conference on November 2 and 3. This is the fourth annual Freedom of Information Conference, and the first one in which the School of Law has participated. The theme of this year's conference was the interrelation of law and journalism. The program included Criminal Procedure by Professor Frank J. Remington, professor of law at the University of Wisconsin; Contempt by Publication and the First Amendment by John Oliver, attorney, Kansas City; The Right of Privacy, by Leon Green, professor of law at the University of Texas; Access to Judicial Records, Albert M. Spradling, Senator, Cape Girardeau; Executive Privilege and Discovery Against the Government, Harry Blanton, attorney, Sikeston; The Bill of Rights—Its Relationship to a Criminal Trial, William H. Becker, Judge, U.S. District Court, Western District of Missouri. Roy P. Swanson, attorney, Kansas City, and President-Elect of the Missouri Bar Association, delivered the introductory remarks at the first session. Dean Covington opened the second session. The speeches were chiefly directed toward journalists, attempting to help them in their reporting of cases and other legal matters.

Law School Foundation Drive For Annual Giving

The University of Missouri Law School Foundation is carrying out a drive for annual gifts to the Foundation. It is hoped that gifts amounting to several thousand dollars a year will result. The chief purpose of this will be to carry on the scholarship program of the Foundation. The Foundation is currently spending $2,400 per year on scholarships; if the gifts justify it, this amount will be increased next year. This drive is concurrent with the drive of the University of Missouri Alumni Achievement Fund drive. A gift to the Foundation will be credited toward the Alumni Achievement Fund. All gifts to the Foundation or to the Alumni Achievement Fund for the benefit of the Law School will be counted toward membership in the Foundation. Any person who gives a total of $100 to the Foundation becomes a member.

The current drive has resulted in gifts totalling about $4,000 since September.

Some of the larger gifts are as follows: Mrs. Edna Nelson has given $1,000 to be added to the Earl F. Nelson Lecture Fund. Mr. James A. Potter of Jefferson City recently gave the Law School some securities valued at $1,000. Edmonton Thompson, son of Guy Thompson, has given $500 to add to the Guy Thompson Scholarship Fund.

Several persons and firms have donated money to purchase chairs for the faculty conference room, which cost about $90 apiece. Hendron and Andrae, Jefferson City, gave $300. Woolsey and Fisher, Springfield, gave $180. Farington and Curtis, Springfield, gave $90. Robert Neill, St. Louis, and Dean Covington each gave $90.

In December the Law School received $47,271 from the Robinson estate, to be invested for scholarships. This makes a total of $117,000 received from the Robinson Estate.

Missouri Traffic Courts Conference

The Tate Hall courtroom was the scene of the three-day (Nov. 30-Dec. 2) Missouri Traffic Courts Conference, sponsored by the Missouri Bar and the Law School, in cooperation with the American Bar Association Traffic Court Program and the Northwestern University Traffic Institute. The sessions were attended by more than 100 traffic court judges, prosecutors, city attorneys, and police.

The visitors were welcomed by Dean Covington and Jackson A. Wright, president of the Missouri Bar Association. Robert W. Welborn, Legal Assistant to Governor Dalton, explained the new Missouri point system. Laurance M. Hyde, Chief Justice of the Missouri Supreme Court, addressed the conference on the professional responsibilities of the traffic judge.

At the conclusion of the conference on Saturday, Thomas F. Eagleton, Attorney General, presented certificates to those who had attended.

Freshman Enrollment Up, Total Enrollment Down

There were 85 beginning students in the School of Law in September. This is the largest number of entering students in any semester since the years immediately following World War II when the returning veterans brought about greatly increased enrollments.

However, the total enrollment in the Law School decreased from 215 in the Fall of 1960, to 207 in the Fall of 1961. This decrease was due to a large 1961 graduating class, and to a smaller entering enrollment in September and February of the 1960-61 school year.

During the past few years there has been only a gradual increase in the enrollment of the nation's law schools. Frequently legal educators comment that emphasis on the sciences and increased financial aid to students in the sciences has resulted in a decrease in the proportion of able students who choose law as a profession. The American Bar Association currently has a special committee studying this problem.

Law School Faculty Adopts New Grading System

After several years of careful planning, the law faculty has adopted a new grading system, which went into effect the fall semester. Unlike the old system of letter grades, which is still used by the University, the new Law School system is based on a numerical scale, calibrated in tenths. The letter grades and the corresponding range on the new scale are as follows: "A," 4.5 to 3.6; "B," 3.5 to 2.6; "C," 2.5 to 1.6; "D," 1.5 to 0.6; and "F," 0.5 to 0.0. The new system will minimize the difference between the best work in any letter grade category and the lowest-ranking work in the letter grade category above. For example, the highest C+ will be a 2.5 on the new scale, while the lowest B- will be a 2.6. The new system, which is like that used in most law schools today, will give the prospective employer a more accurate picture of the student's overall grade average.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Scholarships were again increased for the current year. Last year three $300 Omar E. Robinson scholarships were awarded; in the current year three $500 and two $250 Robinson scholarships were awarded. The Law School Foundation awarded four $300 scholarships last year and approved four additional $300 scholarships at its annual meeting on Law Day in April, 1961, so that the Foundation now awards eight of the $300 scholarships. The Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs established the Hazel Goetsch Scholarship in Law ($500) in honor of Mrs. Gustavf Goetsch. The Dimmitt Hoffman Scholarship of $100 was renewed for the current year. Over $6500 in scholarships will be awarded during the current year, in addition to prizes totalling about $825.

Dean Covington has announced the following scholarships for the 1961-62 school year:

Adele Overal Black Scholarships, $110 each: Lary D. Ruskaup, Rolla; James H. McLarney, Hemple.

Governor Joseph W. Folk Scholarship, $350: James A. Pemberton, Jr., Shelbina.

Hazel Goetsch Scholarship in Law, $500: David L. Knight, Kansas City.

Dimmitt Hoffman Scholarship, $100: Stephen L. Hill, Trenton.

Curators Scholarships, $200 each: James E. Thompson, Kirkswood; Donald Wilson, St. Louis; Dennis Wade Smith, Anaheim, California; Charles E. Hight, Harrisonville.

Law School Foundation Scholarships, $150 per semester: For the first semester, Diana R. Vail, St. Louis; Joseph C. Greene, Springfield; For the second semester, Jimmie D. Sickal, Clarence; Paul J. (Jack) Rice, East St. Louis, Illinois. For two semesters, Henry W. Westbrooke, Jr., Springfield; John C. Tindel, Cabool; Robert M. Lindholm, Webster Groves; Joseph C. Long, Carbondale, Illinois, James N. Foley, St. Joseph.

Omar E. Robinson Scholarships, $500 each: Peter H. Rea, Hilda; David H. Lloyd, Springfield; James R. Robinson, Advance; Leon L. Stelling, Cole Camp; and Newton C. Brill, Columbia (last two $250 each).

Class of 1936 Scholarship in Memory of James L. Parks, $300: James J. Mollenkamp, Richmond.

Fidelity Education Foundation Scholarship, $100: Lynn C. Hoover, Cassville.

Law School Alumni Appointed to Federal Judicial Posts

William H. Becker, class of 1932, Columbia, was sworn in as Judge of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Missouri at a special session of the court in Columbia. The first was in 1906, to admit that year's graduating class to the bar. Boyle G. Clark, Judge Becker's longtime law partner, who presented the new judge to the court, was a member of that class. The late R. Jasper Smith, class of 1931, Chief Judge of the Western District of Missouri, presided, and administered the oath to Judge Becker.

Also on the bench at Judge Becker's installation was another Law School alumnus recently appointed to the federal bench, Floyd Gibson, class of 1933, Independence.

The Law School was also honored by the appointment of James H. Meredith, class of 1937, St. Louis, to the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri.

Recently Senator Symington and Senator Long announced that they will recommend to President Kennedy, for appointment to the new vacancy in the Western District, John W. Oliver, class of 1936, Kansas City.

D. Jeff. Lance, class of 1948, St. Louis, has been appointed U.S. District Attorney at St. Louis.

Moot Court Finals

The four finalists, who will argue a case before a special appellate court this spring at Law Day, are James L. Anding III, James S. Green, James T. Jones, and John C. Tindel.
