Earl F. Nelson Lecture Series

Traynor Cites Need to Uphold Due Process

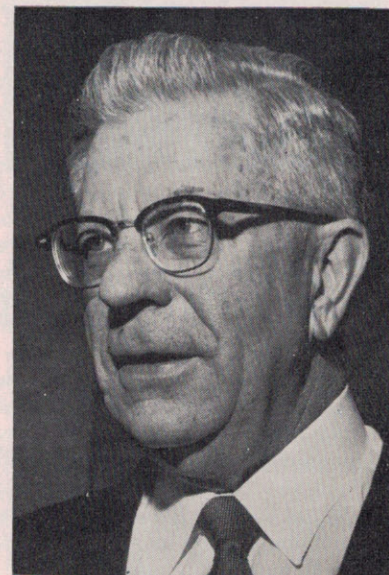

"Courts must stand between man and the excesses of the federal government as well as between man and man. . . . We cannot cut back on protection for the accused for the sake of expediency because the righteous are indignant. . . . Let no one conclude that judges aren't aware of the threat to the public when law-breakers go free, but we can't forget the accused has individual rights which can't be ignored either." Roger J. Traynor, chief justice of the California Supreme Court, said when he delivered the Earl F. Nelson lecture in March.

Judge Traynor's California court has taken the lead in defending these individual rights. Escobedo v. Illinois was the prime case on this issue. The U. S. Supreme Court ruling holds that a man is entitled to the services of a lawyer as soon as the police are ready to charge him.

"The Constitution guarantees every man the right of due process of the law. The courts must protect this right for every man, accused or not."

Order of the Coif to Honor Governor Hearnes on Law Day

Missouri Gov. Warren E. Hearnes will be initiated as an honorary member of the Order of the Coif on the morning of Law Day, April 30 at the University Law School.

Ross Malone, former president of the American Bar Assn., from Roswell, N. M., will address the Edna Nelson Dinner on Friday, April 29, to open the Law Day events. All first year students will be guests at the dinner sponsored by the Law School Foundation in honor of the student editors of the Missouri Law Review.

The alumni banquet also will be held at 7 p. m. Friday at the Daniel Boone Hotel.

The Law School Alumni Assn. will hold its annual meeting Saturday morning, preceding the Coif initiation, and will confer honors on an alumnus, Paul G. Koontz, Kansas City, and one non-alumnus, Judge James M. Douglas, St. Louis. The annual meeting of the members of the Law School Foundation will be at 11 a. m. Saturday.

A picnic lunch will be held at noon on the lawn west of Tate Hall. This usually is the largest Law Day event as about 800 people were served last year.

Moot Court final arguments will be heard at 2 p. m. Saturday in the Courtroom. Phi Alpha Delta and Phi Delta Phi will hold their meetings at 3:30 p.m., with receptions following late in the afternoon.

Phi Delta Phi will honor Missouri Atty. Gen. Norman Anderson, and Phi Alpha Delta will name U.S. Rep. William Hungate as honorary initiates.

Professor Robert A. Farley of the University of Florida College of Law, formerly dean of the University of Mississippi School of Law, will address the closing Law Day banquet at 6:30 p. m. Saturday, and the presentation of student awards will follow. All alumni and friends are invited to attend.

10 Law Students Get On-Job Training

This semester 10 senior law students are receiving training in criminal law that is available at few law schools. Six of the students are assigned to the office of the Circuit Defender and assist him in the defense of indigent accused.

Students have been serving in the defender's office since its establishment in the fall of 1964. Beginning this February, four senior law students were assigned to the Boone County prosecuting attorney's office.

Larger Enrollment Brings Consideration Of New Building

Expanding enrollment for the past three to four years has opened consideration for a new Law School building, according to Dean Joe Covington.

"There are only three classrooms for large classes," he said, and these are nearing their capacity. Already, he pointed out that first-year classes have been divided into two sections and second-year classes may be similarly divided next fall.

The University School of Law is not the only school to be faced with overcrowding, Covington said. Many schools have built new facilities within the past 10 to 15 years including Colorado, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Indiana and Utah.

A proposal has been suggested to the University Board of Curators, he said, but no formal proposal or plans have been drafted.

FACULTY NOTES

Professor William F. Fratcher was a member of the faculty of a workshop for teachers of trust law conducted at New York University School of Law in August, 1965. He prepared a sixty-page paper on Legal Regulation of the Use of Land in the United States for presentation at a Colloquium conducted by the United Kingdom Committee of Comparative Law at the University of Manchester, England, in September, 1965.

As a reporter for the Uniform Probate Code Professor Fratcher attended meetings in Hollywood, Florida, and Chicago, drafted the chapter on protection of persons under disability and their property, and prepared an explanatory commentary on the draft. He attended a meeting of the American Bar Association Special Committee on Military Justice, of which he is a member, at Miami Beach.

He published a book review in the July-August, 1965 number of the Modern Law Review and an article, "Sovereign Immunity in Probate Proceedings" in the Winter 1966 number of the Missouri Law Review. His comment, "The Decline of the Index to Legal Periodicals" and his article, "Toward Uniform Guardianship Legislation" will appear in spring 1966 numbers of the Journal of Legal Education and the Michigan Law Review, respectively.

During the fall semester Professor Fratcher reorganized the Property I course. He has continued to serve on four committees of the American Bar Association. As a member of the Probate and Trusts Committee of the Missouri Bar he contributed to the successful completion of the statutory modification of the application of the rule against perpetuities and drafted bills relating to entails, possibilities of reverter, rights of entry, exempt property, sovereign immunity and competency of witnesses in probate proceedings.

Professor William P. Murphy was appointed in May 1965 to a three-year term on the Missouri Commission on Human Rights by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes. This is the agency which enforces the state fair employment practices and public accommodations statutes.

In May, 1965, Professor Murphy was elected president of the University of Missouri (Columbia) chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors for the academic year 1965-

66. In the spring of 1965 he published book reviews in the Stanford Law Review and the Duke Law Journal, and in the Summer 1965 issue of the Missouri Law Review an article, "The Duty of Fair Representation under the Taft-Hartley Law." Professor Murphy was a contributing editor to Labor Relations and the Law, a labor law casebook which was published in the fall of 1965 and which is used in about forty law schools.

In September, 1965, he spoke to the Jefferson City Branch of the American Assn. of University Women. In October, 1965, he spoke to the Unitarian Fellowship, was a lecturer at a training program for new arbitrators sponsored by the Labor Law Committee of the Bar Assn. of St. Louis, and delivered a memorial tribute to Adlai Stevenson at a public meeting held on United Nations Day.

In January, 1966, Professor Murphy was elected to membership in the National Academy of Arbitrators, and has continued since last year to be actively engaged in the arbitration of labor disputes in the Midwest. In March, 1966, he was a lecturer on a Bill of Rights Seminar sponsored by the Missouri Bar Assn. at Northeast Missouri State College, Kirksville. In April, 1966, he is scheduled to appear on a Law Day USA program sponsored by the Boone County Bar Assn.

He has continued to serve as faculty adviser to Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity. Professor Murphy has received a Summer Research Fellowship for 1966 from the University Research Council. He will be on leave of absence from the law school during 1966-67, during which time he will be in Washington, D. C. serving as a legal assistant to Sam Zagoria, one of the five members of the National Labor Relations Board. He will return to service at the law school in September, 1967.

Professor John S. Divilbiss is serving as Reporter for the Supreme Court Committee on Jury Instruction. The Committee is preparing additional jury instructions for areas not covered in the first volume of MAI. Divilbiss appeared on a panel program at the 1965 meeting of the Missouri Bar for a discussion of "The MAI—253 Days Later." He also appeared on a panel discussion program sponsored by the Missouri Assn. of Claimants' Attorneys where the new jury instructions were also discussed. He also is serving as consultant to the Supreme Court Committee on Rules of Civil Procedure. He has worked with the School of Medicine in putting on medical malpractice trials, attended by medical and law students.

Dean Joe E. Covington was visiting professor of law at the University of Arkansas School of Law for the 1965 summer session. He spoke on trends in law school enrollment to the Section on Legal Education of the American Bar Assn. at the annual meeting, August, 1965, at Miami Beach. He was elected a fellow of the American Bar Foundation. Covington also is a member of the Committee on Selected Readings in Contracts of the Assn. of American Law Schools and an adviser to the Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure of the United States Senate Committee on the Judiciary. He is active in the work of the Missouri Bar Assn., serving as chairman of a subcommittee of the Committee on Continuing Legal Education, and a member of other committees.

Prof. Lowe Works Toward Degree

JUDGE TRAYNOR

Police feel this new interpretation may eliminate confessions because accused persons will have the counsel of a lawyer immediately, Traynor said. The lawyer will advise him against any sort of self-incriminations. Tightening of search and seizure laws also is unpopular among law enforcement groups because it further limits what evidence will be admissible.

These restraints, he says, must be enforced, including those limiting release of pre-trial publicity and prohibiting illegal police interrogation which often results in forced confessions.

This discussion of protection of personal rights for the accused has driven a wedge between judges and police officials in many instances. In some situations the same problem has created serious differences between judge and lawyer.

In his 25 years on the court, Traynor has written 775 opinions and 156 dissensions. He has had the satisfaction of seeing many of those dissensions become the "law of the land" when the U. S. Supreme Court later agreed with his opinion.

Time Magazine in January 1966, described his court as the nation's most aggressive and progressive state court.

He wrote his court's decision to toss out California's anti-miscegenation law in 1948, years before the U. S. Supreme Court considered civil rights.

In 1963, he ruled that it was the duty of the state to end "de facto" segregation in schools and eliminate racial imbalance in school districts. A 1961 California decision held that a suspect was entitled to a lawyer before police interrogation, which foreran the much-publicized Escobedo case.

Time describes him as the "law professor's judge," for his decisions are not stifled by "stare decisis"—the need to follow precedent.

The Earl F. Nelson lectures are sponsored by the University School of Law Foundation in honor of Nelson, an alumnus and former president of the Foundation.

Judge Traynor has served on the California Supreme Court since 1940 and as chief justice since September, 1964. He was professor of law at the University of California from 1929 until his appointment to the court. He also has taught at the University of Chicago and Stanford University law schools.

Enrollment Shows 20 Per Cent Rise

Fall enrollment in the Law School for 1965, jumped more than 20 per cent over 1964. A record total of 355 were enrolled in the fall term compared with 280 a year earlier.

A 170-member first year class, the largest in history, began studies last fall. Six more applicants were admitted in February, after admission standards were raised. The six were the last to be allowed admission at mid-year. Under new admission standards, no beginning students will be allowed admission for the summer session or at mid-year.

Dean Joe E. Covington said inadequate physical facilities will require more selective admission requirements this fall.

Fall enrollments since 1961 reflect the School's growth:

1961	208
1962	243
1963	258
1964	280
1965	355

SENIOR CLASS AND FACULTY — 1966

Covington Lauds Job Opportunities

Job opportunities for 1966 graduates are the best in the history of the Law School, according to Dean Joe Covington.

Many students already have arranged to become associates with firms, and others have been employed by corporations at salaries ranging as high as $9,600 a year.

Several federal agencies have been seeking graduates for their legal staffs. Salaries for beginning attorneys with government agencies usually range from $6,269 a year to $7,449 for graduates in the upper twenty per cent of the class.

About one-third of this year's graduates will enter military service. Many students in the first- and second-year classes are receiving notices of re-classification, and the Selective Service has begun tightening the requirements for a II-S classification after a student receives an undergraduate degree or completes four years of college.

Video Tapes Show Trial Mannerisms

Law students enrolled in trial practice have been startled to discover that they have habits and mannerisms they never suspected after observing video tapes of their trials.

The trials are being recorded by two remote control cameras and a video tape recorder in the courtroom. The entire trial is recorded and replayed a day or two later so that students may see and hear how they appear when conducting a trial.

Murphy to Serve NLRB Internship

Prof. William P. Murphy, professor of labor and constitutional law at the University School of Law, has been selected to serve a year's internship under Sam Zagoria, a member of the National Labor Relations Board.

Prof. Murphy, president of the Missouri chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors, will take a year's leave of absence from his teaching duties. He is the first to fill this post.

Foundation Seeks Gifts For Student Loan Fund

The University Law School Foundation has established a loan fund for students in law school which amounts to about $14,000, but additional gifts are needed as the entire fund has been loaned this year. Loans are made at four per cent interest.

Loans are also available from other University loan funds, and the American Bar Assn. established a loan program for second and third-year students last year. Loans are made by a New York bank, and the American Bar Assn. provides security for the loan. The interest rate on these loans is six per cent and the total can be paid over a number of years following graduation.

Law Assn. Elects Webber Vice President

Richard Webber, a second-year law student, was elected vice president of the eighth circuit of the American Law Students Assn. recently at a regional conference in St. Louis.

The conference will be held at the University of Missouri next year. Thirteen schools from seven states comprise the association.

Webber is from Memphis, Mo., and was a member of QEBH and ODK undergraduate honor societies and was president of the Men's Residence Hall Assn.

Prof. Firmage Serves Year at White House

Professor Edwin B. Firmage this summer will complete a year as a White House Fellow where he has been working in the areas of poverty and civil rights under Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey.

He has described a "typical day" as including morning briefing of the Vice President on meetings of the day, studying Title VI enforcement problems at the Department of Justice, writing speeches, briefing on Youth opportunity campaigns and study of other Economic Opportunity programs.

Librarians Attend Annual Meeting

Thirty-five law librarians from eight states attended the annual meeting April 1-2 of the Southwestern Chapter of the American Assn. of Law Libraries held at the University Law School.

Marcia Miller, University assistant law librarian, served this year as chapter president. Law librarian George E. Skinner was the program chairman for the meeting.

The Law Library recently has replaced the old wooden chairs with seventy metal chairs with padded seats and backs.

The Law Library is continuing to increase in size and now contains more than 110,000 volumes.
