Larry L. McMullen ('59), Dean Timothy J. Heinsz and George E. Ashley ('48) converse at the 1990 Law Society Dinner.
"It is not enough to understand what we ought to be, unless we know what we are." T.S. Eliot, Religion and Literature. Many times in the daily performance of our tasks we can lose focus of the changing nature of our duties and the goals we seek to achieve. This is as true at the law school as it is in any of your law practices or business endeavors. It is important on occasion to step back and consider who we are and what we are about. In this process, it is even more beneficial to open oneself up to review and critique by others who are expert in the field of legal education.

Every seven years the American Bar Association requires a law school to go through such a process of evaluation. The purpose of this inspection is to ensure that a law school meets the requirements of the ABA to provide its students with an education which will adequately prepare them for the practice of law.

"Another significant change has been in our physical facility, John K. Hulston Hall, ...one of the outstanding law buildings in the country."

In preparation for the visit by a site team of legal educators and practitioners, the ABA requests that the law school prepare a self-study to aid in this review process. This document gives an overview of the law school and the evolution which has taken place over the past seven years. I would like to share some of this progress with you.

Our mission continues to be to provide the best education and training in the principles of law, coupled with practical application skills that allow our graduates to practice their profession at the highest level in either a public or private setting. Perhaps our most noticeable change has been in our physical facility, John K. Hulston Hall, which is truly one of the outstanding law buildings in the country. In its design and state-of-the-art computer automation, it provides our faculty and students with opportunities to accomplish their tasks of teaching, learning, scholarship and public service.
"It is important on occasion to step back and consider who we are and what we are about."

Another significant change has been the increased qualifications of our entering classes. During the past five years LSAT scores have risen from a 33 (60th percentile) to a 39 (85th percentile) and a cumulative grade point average of 3.1 to 3.3. These classes make for an outstanding group of students to teach and provide excellent graduates who will enter our profession in the coming years. We have contributed to the needed diversity in the practice through our enhanced recruitment and retention of minority and disadvantaged students.

There have been many developments in our educational program during this past seven years. The core curriculum has remained much the same as when you attended law school. Moreover, unlike some institutions, we continue to require many courses outside of the first-year curriculum, such as constitutional law, evidence, business organizations, basic federal income taxation, trusts and estates, and professional responsibility. In addition, each student must complete three writing requirements. To improve the writing skills of our students, we have added a Director of Legal Writing, Professor Melody Daily ('86). One innovation has been our first-year curriculum project which integrates the teaching of dispute resolution techniques into all standard first-year courses. This important program, with the strong support of Professor Len Riskin, Director of the Center for the Study of Dispute Resolution, has been recognized as a major development in legal education by experts across the country. The law school continues to devote a substantial portion of time and resources to skills training courses. Our trial practice program stands as one of our strengths. In addition, we provide our students with clinical placement opportunities either outside the law school in externships or within the school in the mediation clinic or business planning clinic.

"We face an upcoming academic year...working with the smallest budget of any law school in the Big Eight or Big Ten or within the state...I can only hope that the year ahead will provide some relief in the form of increased funding through tax reform...."

The faculty has remained relatively stable as to number and personnel over the past decade. Our student-faculty ratio has been a concern since it has run higher than competitor schools and has been noted to us by the American Bar...
Association. Although many good and talented colleagues have moved to other law schools or careers during this time, we have been able to retain a number of our best teachers. We have also replaced those who have left with an outstanding group of new faculty members.

As I have stated on numerous occasions, my biggest challenge is to maintain the quality of our faculty and our educational program. Certainly resources continue to be an important issue in this process. Economically, the recession has adversely impacted the law school just as it has many of your practices. We face an upcoming academic year where we already have been informed that at best there will be no budget increases and a salary and wage "freeze." Moreover, working with the smallest budget of any law school in the Big Eight or Big Ten or within the state makes this endeavor even more difficult. I can only hope that the year ahead will provide some relief in the form of increased funding through tax reform, so that our small budget base and decreasing state appropriations do not adversely affect the quality of our program.

A final strength we have noted again in this review process is you—our alumni. Without your support, we would be unable to sustain our fine educational program. Your contributions to our $2.5 million endowment campaign "Excellence Into The 21st Century" attests once more your belief in your law school.

Having completed our review and the visit of the site inspection team, we eagerly await the report of the ABA. This evaluation process has caused us to know better what we are; now we will consider further what we ought to be.

Honorable Theodore McMillian Delivers 1991 Adler-Rosecan Lecture

Theodore McMillian, Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, presented the annual Adler-Rosecan Lecture on February 22, 1991, at a luncheon for students, faculty and alumni. Judge McMillian's topic was "The Negligence Principle on the Run: Is It Fair to Reallocate Resources Without Regard to Fault?" Judge McMillian noted that the concept of strict tort liability has caused certain egregious cases to occur where juries have awarded large verdicts for product defects which could not have been anticipated by manufacturers, and even where there had been added necessary safety features. He traced the history of strict tort liability. He explained how Section 402A of the Restatement (Second) of Torts has become widely adopted through case law and statutes. Judge McMillian opined that, overall, strict tort liability remains a fair concept to allocate the cost of injuries as a result of our complex manufacturing and distribution processes.

The funding for the luncheon and speaker is provided by the Adler-Rosecan Foundation and, in particular, through the generosity of Mortimer Rosecan (class of 1936).
Dear MU School of Law Alumni:

We have known for many years that higher education in Missouri is chronically underfunded. As representatives of the community that is fortunate to be the home of our state's premier public land grant university, we have worked diligently to improve and protect the amount of state allocations MU receives each year. Unfortunately, the higher education budget remains flat largely due to the lack of an adequate tax base in Missouri to support our many needed services.

Education funding -- particularly for higher education -- was a major topic of debate and discussion during this legislative session. A major effort by Senator James Mathewson, D-Sedalia, who is President Pro-Tem of the Senate, led to eventual passage of an education reform and funding package that would provide $385 million more for elementary, secondary and higher education in the state. The education funding/reform package will be on the November 5, 1991 ballot for Missouri voters to consider.

Indeed, the needs of higher education in Missouri are great. Consider these facts:

- We rank 48th in the nation in per-capita support for higher education.
- MU now has more than $50 million in deferred maintenance and repair projects for academic buildings because the state dollars have not been there to fund them.
- One-third of the faculty at MU will be eligible to retire in the next decade, and current funding levels will not permit the University to replace their level of quality.
- More than 25,000 students who qualified for financial aid last year through the Missouri Student Grant Program were denied that aid due to lack of funding.
- Tuition has gone up more than 150 percent in the last decade as the burden of funding for education has shifted from the state to the student.

All of these facts should dismay supporters of higher education in Missouri. When you consider the long-term economic impact a poorly funded system of education has on a state, it should be disheartening to all Missourians.

We know that MU leaders are working to encourage broad-based support for a higher education funding package. Many civic and business leaders are calling publicly for better higher education funding. A great number of MU alumni are working to encourage support.

As graduates of the MU School of Law, you are positioned to be among key supporters of better higher education funding. You can play an important role in communicating the needs and benefits of a strong system of higher education to friends, colleagues and civic leaders in your communities. We need your support to see this issue succeed at the polls.

Higher education has reached a critical crossroads. Now is the time for Missourians to choose between quality and mediocrity. We, along with many others, are working to support better funding for higher education. We hope you will join us and that you will communicate your concern with those in your community. Together, we can succeed in November and put higher education back on the road toward excellence.

Sincerely,

Law School Completes Second

During the past decade, the Law School has enhanced its physical facilities and academic program through increased private support from its alumni and friends. Since 1983, the School has set the pace for the MU campus with the completion of two successful capital fund-raising campaigns.

The first was the successful Building Campaign which resulted in the premier physical facility in the nation. Following the Building Campaign, the Law School implemented a comprehensive long-range program to address the challenge of maintaining high quality faculty and support programs to ensure the continued academic leadership of the School. This resulted in a new effort to secure an additional $2 million in private endowment support through THE LAW SCHOOL CAMPAIGN: EXCELLENCE INTO THE 21ST CENTURY.

On Law Day, April 28, 1990, Dean Timothy J. Heinsz announced that the $2 million goal had been reached seven months ahead of schedule and that the School had

One Half Million in Research Support

Increased faculty support was the primary objective of The Law School Campaign: Excellence Into The 21st Century. During the $2.5 million Campaign, which was successfully completed in November 1990, more than half of the total commitments were designated for increased faculty support in the form of professorships and Faculty Research Fellowships. In fact, Faculty Research Fellowships accounted for $500,000 in additional support for the faculty of the Law School.

The Law School created Faculty Research Fellowships to enhance the opportunities for those faculty members interested in conducting legal research especially during the summer months. The intent of the Fellowships is to encourage continued research and scholarship on the part of the Law faculty so they remain on the cutting edge of their respective areas of legal expertise. Thus far, $500,000 in commitments have been received to establish 29 named Faculty Research Fellowships. All stipends awarded are from private funds raised through the Law School Foundation.

The process for receiving a Research Fellowship is administered by the Dean of the Law School who solicits proposals from Law faculty members interested in conducting summer research. The Dean personally reviews each proposal and determines which increased the campaign goal to $2.5 million, with a fund-raising deadline of December 31, 1990. During November 1990, the Law School surpassed its new goal and announced the completion of its endowment campaign “Excellence Into The 21st Century.”

"Once again, our alumni have clearly indicated their intentions to sustain and enhance the academic caliber of the Law School," Dean Heinsz said. "Not only were they responsible for our outstanding new building, but again our alumni have demonstrated their support to enhance the teaching, learning and research opportunities for our outstanding faculty and students. As the direct beneficiaries of this support, we are aware that without our alumni it would not have been possible and are grateful for all they continue to do on behalf of the Law School," Heinsz stated.

faculty will receive a Research Fellowship based on their contribution to the development of legal knowledge, publishability, overall organization and scholarship.

Those faculty members who receive Research Fellowships are evaluated by the Dean at the end of the summer for the work conducted. If a research project extends beyond one summer, the Dean conducts additional evaluations at the end of the fall semester and, again, at the end of the winter semester.

"Faculty Research Fellowships are a means for us to continue to provide our outstanding faculty members with opportunities that would otherwise not be available through normal budget sources," Dean Timothy J. Heinsz stated. "The primary objective for our fund raising program is to generate additional support for our faculty. It is apparent that our dedicated alumni have once again stepped forth to assist us by providing critical resources to achieve our goal. I am very proud for the support they continue to give and offer a heartfelt thank you to each one of them," Heinsz said.
Thompson & Mitchell: A Decade of

During September 1981, the St. Louis law firm of Thompson & Mitchell established a fund on the books of the Law School Foundation to recognize the contributions of the School’s faculty to the legal profession in the State of Missouri. Known as the Thompson & Mitchell Faculty Development Fund, it was created to further the continuing legal and professional development of the faculty of the Law School. More specifically, it was the firm’s desire that the funds be used principally to defray the expenses of faculty members who attended seminars, workshops or other gatherings of lawyers and legal educators at which members of the faculty can further their professional skills as lawyers, scholars and educators.

Within this general parameter, however, Thompson & Mitchell intended to give the Dean of the Law School substantial discretion as to the particular purposes to which the contributions should be applied. They recognized that exceptional circumstances may arise where particular needs of the faculty may require application of the funds for other purposes and they authorized the Dean to make such disbursements for the benefit of the faculty as appropriate.

The fund was set up with an initial contribution of $2,000. The law firm hoped to make similar contributions in succeeding years with the intent that eventually the accumulated surplus of such contributions would constitute a self-perpetuating endowment fund. Since that initial investment was made nearly ten years ago, Thompson & Mitchell has continued to make annual

The Trial Institute: Richard W. Morefield Selected

During July 1990 the School of Law hosted The Trial Institute. This intensive, three-day trial workshop involved ten trial teams representing firms and legal offices across the state and featured an accomplished faculty including distinguished members of the bar and judiciary.

During the first two days of the conference participants took part in workshops focusing on opening statements, direct and cross examination of expert and lay witnesses, and closing arguments. The final morning of the program the trial teams took part in a mock trial exercise.

At the close of the program an Outstanding Associate was chosen based upon the cumulative evaluations of all faculty members. Richard W. Morefield from the Kansas City law firm of Morrison, Hecker, Curtis, Kuder & Parrish was selected for this honor as a result of his outstanding participation at the conference.

The School of Law wishes to acknowledge Rick Morefield and the Morrison Hecker firm, as well as the commitments and have contributed a total of $22,000 in support of this fund. And the Law School has implemented the fund in accordance with the original stipulations as set forth by the law firm, that is, to use the funds solely for faculty development and to set aside a portion of the annual contributions for investment, so that the corpus of the fund will eventually become self-sustaining.

The Law School is proud to announce that as of December 31, 1990, the corpus of the Thompson & Mitchell Faculty Development Fund has reached $12,000. In addition, one of the firm's partners, Gary Mayes ('74), informed Dean Timothy Heinsz that the firm would be increasing its annual contribution to $4,000.

"The Thompson & Mitchell Faculty Development Fund has had a significant impact on the ability of our faculty to continue their professional development. As a member of the faculty, I am personally indebted to them for their ongoing commitment and foresight. Too often critical funds are not available to address the issue of professional development. Thompson & Mitchell has seen fit to commit itself to address this issue on behalf of our faculty and I extend my sincere thanks to them and look forward to a mutually satisfying relationship in the years ahead," Dean Heinsz said.

Center for the Study of

Rule 17 Mediation Training

The Center and The Missouri Bar CLE co-sponsored mediation training programs in Kansas City in November 1990 and March 1991. The workshops were designed to qualify trainees to be listed as mediators under the new Rule 25.1 of the Jackson County Circuit Court dealing with "early dispute resolution". That Rule was adopted pursuant to Missouri Supreme Court Rule 17, adopted in November 1990.

The training was conducted by Center Director Leonard Riskin, J. Michael Keating of Tillinghast, Collins and Graham of Providence, Rhode Island, and Professor Charles Wiggins of the University of San Diego School of Law. The first workshop resulted in the formation of a Kansas City Mediators Network.

Production of Videotape Series on ADR

Center Director Leonard Riskin and Assistant Director Deborah Doxsee ('88) are completing a series of four videotapes to be used to demonstrate alternative dispute resolution methods. The project is supported by a grant from the U.S. Department of Education’s Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education. Each tape is designed for a specific first year class and also will be suitable for use by lawyers. An instructor’s manual will accompany each tape.

The tapes are as follows: Tape I: A Transaction Negotiation for Contract Law; Tape II: A Mediation for Property Law; Tape III: A Medical Malpractice Negotiation for Tort Law; and, for either Civil Procedure or Torts, Tape IV, concerns how a lawyer should discuss alternative dispute resolution with a client and with opposing counsel.

The tapes will be distributed by West Publishing Company beginning in the summer of 1991.

Attorney/Client Fee Dispute Resolution

The Center was asked by The Missouri Bar’s Special Committee on Fee Dispute Resolution in the summer of 1989 to provide consultation and assistance on drafting a proposal to set up a statewide program for resolving fee disputes between lawyers and their clients. Center Assistant Director, Deborah Doxsee, assisted in drafting the proposal that was later forwarded to the Board of Governors and subsequently adopted in the fall of 1989. In the fall of 1990, the Board of Governors authorized the establishment of the program which the Missouri Bar Plan has agreed to fund.

Ms. Doxsee has been appointed a member of the Special Committee, chaired by Columbia attorney, Robert Smith. The Special Committee is now exploring the implementation of the program and the formal committee is to be named by the Board of Governors in May.

MU Faculty Grievance Procedures Review

Last fall, Vice Provost of Minority Affairs, Dr. KC Morrison, asked Leonard Riskin and Deborah Doxsee to conduct a review of the faculty grievance process at MU. They will report on the utility and efficiency of the faculty grievance procedures over the last ten years. Center staff will interview past hearing panel members as well as past grievants concerning their perceptions of the current procedures. In addition, they will compare the grievance procedures of this campus with those at comparable universities across the country and will make recommendations.

Community Mediation Service

The Community Mediation Service has completed two years under the tenure of Director Deborah Doxsee in May 1991. During that time the Mediation Service has continued to operate its Community Mediation Program, and has added a Victim-Offender Mediation Program. The mediation service is staffed primarily by law students who are participating in a clinical class and completing substantive course work in mediation. The students receive 20 hours of specialized mediation training.

Community Mediation Program and Victim-Offender Mediation Program

Use of the Mediation Services' two programs has steadily increased over the course of the last two years. Case referrals come from a variety of sources, such as individuals involved in disputes, attorneys and university campus Student Legal Service. The Victim-Offender Mediation Program participates in matters handled by both the MU Campus Police and the City of Columbia Police Department. Its case referrals come primarily from the City of Columbia Municipal Court in coordination with the local Columbia City Prosecutor's Office.

Peer Mediation Program

In the spring of 1990, the Center was contacted by the Parent Teachers and Students Association (PTSA) Safety Committee for West Junior High School in Columbia to act in a consultative role in setting up and establishing a peer mediation program at West Junior High School. The Director of the Community Mediation Service, Deborah Doxsee, met with a committee of parents, teachers, and administrators at West Junior High School for several months last spring and in the beginning of fall, 1990 as plans were made for the implementation of the peer mediation program. In this program, students involved in conflicts are given the opportunity to work out their (continued page 13)
If you remember taking a first-year course called Legal Bibliography, you probably have a vague recollection of sitting in a large lecture room, taking notes while the teacher described various sets of library books, and then wandering through the library trying to find answers to questions such as "Which United States Supreme Court opinion defines 'anadromous fish'?"

If that description sounds familiar, you might not recognize the course that replaced Legal Bibliography. The new course—Legal Research and Writing—is a first-semester, two-credit course taught in six small sections of approximately 25 students each. The purpose of the course is to teach students the analytical, research, and writing skills they need to solve problems the way lawyers do.

The Context of Legal Problem Solving

In Legal Research and Writing, the information students need to learn is introduced when it is relevant. Consequently, the course is not presented as a series of seemingly unrelated lectures describing library books, citation rules, and memorandum format, and students do not go to the library to do the standardized bibliography exercises referred to as "treasure hunts" or "search-and-destroy missions."

Instead, students are immediately assigned a simple research problem, and the information they need to approach that problem is presented at the appropriate time. For example, after the students are assigned a problem that requires them to research case law, they are taught to use the West Key Number Digests, and they go to the library to use the appropriate Digests and Reporters to find relevant cases. Later, when they are ready to write a memorandum analyzing their findings, they look at sample memoranda on other topics and develop their own criteria for a good memorandum.

During the semester, students cycle through the research and writing process three times (with three different problems to solve), and they learn additional information each time. For the first assignment, they learn to gather information from a client interview, to research and interpret statutes, and to write a client letter. For the second, they learn to find and analyze cases, to use secondary sources such as American Law Reports, to Shepardize, and to write a legal memorandum. For the third assignment—a research project—they again use printed library sources, and they also learn to use LEXIS or WESTLAW. (Students are introduced to one service the first semester and the other during the second semester.) For this assignment, students are required to turn in detailed journals describing their research process and to write a two-page summary of their findings.

Coordination with First-Year Courses

Legal Research and Writing is now coordinated with the other first-year classes. All the writing assignments are based on topics that are introduced in the first-year courses. This approach enables students to apply and develop the analytical skills they are learning in other classes, and it prevents them from spending an inordinate amount of time trying to teach themselves a topic like comparative fault before they have studied negligence. In addition, the research and writing they do for this course helps them learn information that will be included on their substantive law final examinations.

Collaborative Learning

Students are permitted to work together on all of their writing assignments except the last (which is treated as a take-home examination). Previously, all research and writing assignments were governed by the Honor Code, and students were penalized for discussing their thoughts or their research. In contrast, in their substantive courses, students were encouraged to form study groups to consider and challenge their peers' analyses of materials. Today, students in Legal Research and Writing learn to approach problems as lawyers do. They meet with other students in their "firm" to discuss the facts of their problem and to identify the legal issues. They consider appropriate research strategies, conduct their research, and compare their results. After they have written their first drafts of memoranda or client letters, they exchange papers and evaluate each other's work according to specific criteria they have developed. Throughout the process students learn from each other, but they also discover that each person is ultimately responsible for his or her own work product. Consequently, they learn that they must decide for themselves when to heed and when to ignore their peers' advice.

Faculty

Legal Research and Writing is taught by Bob Bailey, Chip Cox, Melody Daily, Mark Gutchen, and Randy Wiemer, all of whom hold J.D. degrees. Bob Bailey ('79) is an assistant dean and the academic advisor of the law school. Chip Cox ('82) formerly worked for the Missouri Attorney General's office and for the Missouri Department of Revenue, but he recently returned to the University to pursue graduate studies in the Department of History. Melody Daily ('86) is the Director of Legal Research and Writing. Mark Gutchen practiced law in Arizona for three years before moving to Missouri, and he is now an attorney for Mid-Missouri Legal Services Corporation. Randy Wiemer ('83) is the law school's computer programming analyst.

Problems by sitting down across the table from the student they are in conflict with in the presence of the trained peer mediators.

Ms. Doxsee, assisted by attorney Barbara Hoppe, a CMS board member, trained the first group of 40 students at West Junior High in November 1990. These students began handling cases in December 1990 and reports from school administrators indicate the program is a success. A second group of students were trained in February 1991, bringing the total of students trained at West Junior High School to about 60. Law students who are currently taking the clinical-mediation course also participate in the supervision of the peer mediators.
Law library management, in days of limited funds and inflated book prices, is not an easy task. We are frequently asked whether we cooperate with other law school libraries and share acquisitions. It is in answer to these questions and concerns that I have decided to tell you about the existence of the Mid-America Law School Library Consortium, its work and accomplishments.

About a decade ago, in response to the concerns of Al Smith, dean of the MU Law School, and other law school deans, 18 law school librarians got together in St. Louis and formed a consortium with the specific goal of sharing resources and cooperating in interlibrary loans. The Consortium—consisting of the four law school libraries of Missouri, two in Kansas, three in Illinois, two in Iowa, two in Nebraska, three in Oklahoma, two in Arkansas and, more recently, the one in South Dakota—was incorporated as a non-profit Missouri corporation. Since 1980 the law school library directors have met regularly four times a year to discuss issues and work on cooperative projects. The list of achievements is quite lengthy.

At first the libraries only exchanged information on subject strength, purchase of expensive items, holdings of periodicals, availability of looseleaf services and up-to-date basic law library statistics. Of these projects the exchange of information concerning periodicals, resulting in the paper and microfiche publications of a union list of law reviews, has been continued to this date as an annual, highly used reference item. Another cooperative project, the prompt exchange of annual law library statistics, turned out to be especially helpful to administrators in their planning for budget and personnel.

Soon it became obvious, however, that our labor intensive work of compiling lists and surveys, and the fund established through the modest annual dues ($50) charged to member institutions, yielded useful reference type information but did not help significantly our library patrons. We needed funds to back up our cooperative efforts with quick document delivery. Thanks to a grant from the American Association of Law Libraries the Consortium purchased jointly, as early as 1983, telefax machines for its members for the telephone transmittal of pages from legal periodicals or treatises. (See 7:2 The Law School Transcript 8 (Fall, 1984)).

Our second achievement, funded this time by a federal grant, was the combining of the 18 law schools' library catalogs on two CD-ROM discs and making these available to the users without accruing online telephone or database charges. The system, called the Intelligent Catalog, manufactured by Library Corporation of Inwood, West Virginia, is compiled from the cataloging tapes produced by Consortium members using either OCLC or RLIN, the national online utilities. A simple visit to the Intelligent Catalog workstation in our Library's Reference Alcove will demonstrate to the user the system and will allow a review of the holdings of member law school libraries, be it the collection of the University of Iowa or, within the state, Washington University or any other law school.

The Consortium has currently submitted another federal grant application requesting support for the development of a sophisticated reference and information transfer network. Should the Consortium get the grant, we envision data transfer capability among members, and the exchange of information through an extensive electronic bulletin board system.

The Consortium has grown from a small, informal group to a significant organization. Besides continuing with the projects described above, it is expanding its goals to cover educational objectives, such as offering workshops to nonprofessional law library staff members and bringing together computer lab coordinators. It cannot be said that any of the accomplishments have reduced the law school libraries' budget. On the contrary, many of the grants hinged on matching funds that the libraries provided frequently "in kind" by producing detailed cataloging information and making it available on tapes. Nonetheless membership in the Consortium has been a worthwhile and satisfactory experience. The law school libraries have taken pride in being on the cutting edge of the movement for library cooperation, are part of modern technological advancements, and, best of all, can provide up-to-date information and excellent service to their users.

Notice to alumni interested in the LEXIS service: Anyone signing up with the Lexis membership service sponsored by our Law Library during the months of June or July and completing the free LEXIS training within the following two months, will get free use of the LEXIS/NEXIS services for one month, free LEXIS Communications and check citing softwares, and $100 credit toward the purchase of a LEXIS certified modem. New Faculty Profiles

Three new professors have joined the Law School faculty. Professors Arnopol, Abrams and Pasqualucci each bring a wealth of experience and legal expertise to the school. We welcome their arrival and encourage our alums to become acquainted with these excellent additions to the law faculty.

Professor Michelle M. Arnopol

Education:
University of Illinois, (B.A. 1979)
University of Illinois, (J.D. 1982)

Honors:
Notes & Comments Editor
(Writing Competition) University of Illinois Law Review
Magna cum laude graduate
Rickert Scholarship for excellence in legal writing
Harno Fellow

Work Experience:
Sidley & Austin - Associate - Tax & Employment Benefits Group, Chicago, Illinois
Isham, Lincoln & Beale - Associate - Litigation Department, Chicago, Illinois

Now in her second year at the School of Law, Professor Arnopol's enthusiasm and high energy level have made her an exceptional addition to the law faculty. Professor Arnopol teaches courses in tax and bankruptcy. Dedication to teaching, an open door policy and a strong rapport with her students have been the hallmarks of her first two years as a member of the School of Law faculty.
Professor Douglas E. Abrams

Education:

Wesleyan University, (B.A. 1973)
(Phi Beta Kappa)
Columbia University, (J.D. 1976)
(summa cum laude)

Major Publications:

The Law of Civil RICO (Little Brown 1991; 600 pages)

Work Experience:

Fordham University School of Law, Associate Professor of Law, New York, New York

Kaye, Scholer, Fierman, Hays & Handler - Associate - Litigation and Corporate Law Departments, New York, New York

New York State Court of Appeals - Law Clerk to the Honorable Hugh R. Jones, Albany, New York

Professor Abrams came to the School of Law as a visiting professor during the 1989-1990 school year and joined the faculty as an associate professor this past fall. In addition to teaching courses in civil procedure, trial practice and juvenile law, Professor Abrams has devoted a great deal of time to the completion of his Civil RICO treatise soon to be published by Little Brown. As chair of the Judicial Clerkship Committee, he has taken an active role in helping students secure judicial clerkships. He is also the proud head coach of the Jefferson City youth ice hockey program.

Professor Jo Pasqualucci

Education:

University of Wisconsin (B.A. 1971)
University of Wisconsin (M.S. 1975)
University of Wisconsin (J.D. 1986)

Honors:

Editor, Wisconsin Law Review
Order of the Coif
Dean's Scholastic Achievement Award

Work Experience:

University of Wisconsin Law School, Lecturer, Madison, Wisconsin
Foley & Lardner - Associate - Commercial Litigation Department, Madison, Wisconsin
Inter-American Court of Human Rights, Clerk, San Jose, Costa Rica
United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees - Director of Environmental Health, Mesa Grande Refugee Camp, Honduras
Food for the Hungry, Administrative Assistant, Antigua, Guatemala

Excellent academic credentials, long hours and a love of teaching have made for an outstanding first year for Professor Pasqualucci. Teaching contracts and commercial law, Professor Pasqualucci is often seen engaged in lively and vigorous debate with her students. Prior to her career in law, Professor Pasqualucci, who is fluent in Spanish, devoted her professional life to assisting the poor in Latin American countries.
Marilyn Eth's twenty years at the Law School

In 1971 the Law School gained a valuable staff member who would become an important component of the School. Students have looked to Marilyn Eth for assistance, both during their school years and after graduation, and have found that she is always willing to help however she can. Since 1981, Marilyn has worked closely with students in administering exam numbers, grades, transcripts and Bar applications, just to name a few of her duties.

After being at home with her four children for over twenty years, Marilyn decided to return to the work force. Through a government training program, she acquired the skills she needed to return to the work place. Even after completing the training course, Marilyn found it difficult to get a job because she had been out of the work setting for so many years. After her interview at the Law School, she was given the opportunity to begin again, and the School was given the opportunity to add a loyal employee and an asset to its staff.

During her twenty years, Marilyn has seen the Law School under several leaders: Dean Willard L. Eckhardt, Dean Allen E. Smith, Interim Dean James E. Westbrook, Dean Dale A. Whitman and our present Dean, Timothy J. Heinsz. "Marilyn is the glue that keeps the Law School together," Dean Heinsz commented. "She has more experience than any other individual at the School with students, faculty and alumni. She goes out of her way to help anyone who asks. She shows true dedication to the School. I feel very fortunate to have the opportunity to work with Marilyn."

A poster that hangs on her office wall reminds Marilyn of her hometown, Kansas City. She has been a baseball fan since she was "a kid" and her father took her to see the minor league teams. She has since become an avid Kansas City Royals fan. Once a year, Shook, Hardy & Bacon invites the Law School faculty to attend a Royals game, and Marilyn enjoys accompanying them to the game.

Over the past twenty years, Marilyn has enjoyed working with the faculty, staff and students. "I like everybody", Marilyn says, "I will work as long as I can". We would like to congratulate Marilyn on her twenty years of service to the Law School.

Special Invitation

THE TRIAL INSTITUTE

July 21-24 the School of Law will once again host The Trial Institute. Participants at this intensive, three-day workshop will complete 25 hours of MCLE credit and gain invaluable trial experience in a short period of time.

Enrollment at this conference is limited to three-person teams from firms or legal departments located within Missouri.

The first two days of the program will include lectures, demonstrations and break-out sessions. During the break-out sessions, participants will each present an opening statement, closing argument and a direct and cross examination of both lay and expert witnesses. On the final morning of the program, the trial teams will participate in a mock trial exercise that calls upon participants to utilize the skills developed in the workshops of the previous two days.

For the second year, an "Outstanding Associate" will be selected as a result of exceptional skill demonstrated during the course of the conference. Selected by the conference faculty, this individual and his or her firm will be acknowledged by the awarding of a framed certificate.

This program is designed to build the skill and confidence of young attorneys at an early stage of their legal careers. As enrollment will be limited, we encourage early registration for the conference.

Please send additional information concerning the Institute.

Please pre-register our team for the Institute.

Registration Fee $1,120 (Team of 3)

Our team will be comprised of:
1) ___________________________

Douglas E. Abrams was a panelist at the Association of American Law Schools workshop on "Legal Writing Throughout the Law School Curriculum" in Washington, D.C. He spoke about "Integrating Writing Instruction into Civil Procedure." The workshop was part of the AALS Annual Meeting, attended by law professors from throughout the nation. In June, Little, Brown & Company will publish his treatise, The Law of Civil RICO. He has also signed a contract to revise the chapter on "New York Court of Appeals Practice" in the leading New York Appellate Practice treatise. The Court of Appeals is New York's highest court. Doug began his career as a law clerk to a judge of that court. The revised chapter will be published this autumn. This winter Doug is head coach of the youth ice hockey program sponsored by the Jefferson City Parks and Recreation Department. The program has 45 players between the ages of eight and sixteen. In the spring and autumn, he is coach with Assistant Dean Bob Bailey in the Columbia youth soccer program. They coach a team in the girls 13-14 year-old division.

Michelle Arnopol presented a speech entitled "Annual Survey of the Law: Bankruptcy Update" outlining recent developments in the law of bankruptcy and planning opportunities at the annual meeting of The Missouri Bar. Her article on preservation of a corporation's net operating losses following a Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization and a lead article for the Missouri Law Review Symposium on Bankruptcy Law concerning expanding the scope of the bankruptcy estate to include pension benefits and converted assets are presently in progress.

Assistant Dean Bob Bailey was chosen as the honorary coach for the Missouri-Kansas basketball game on February 12, 1991. Coach Norm Stewart enjoyed a moment before the game with Bob. While MU did not prevail, by all accounts Bob had an enjoyable experience.
Assistant Dean Robert Bailey received the Graduate Professional Council's Gold Chalk Award. The award recognizes faculty who most notably stimulate and guide student development. For the third consecutive year, he served as co-chair of MU's United Way Campaign. He also serves as the Allocation's Chair for the United Way and serves on its executive Board. He will be serving as the director of the 1991 Council on Legal Education Opportunity (CLEO) summer program. In conjunction with these duties, he attended a workshop in Washington, D.C., in February. He was MU's Honorary Coach for the MU-KU basketball game on February 12th.

Peter Davis has published an article "Federal and State Water Quality Regulation and Law in Missouri" in the Missouri Law Review. He presented a speech entitled "Environmental Protection in China" for the Noel P. Gist Luncheon Seminar on International Affairs. He is presently working on a Water Pollution Law book for Butterworth Legal Publishers. He was re-elected chairman of the Railroad Advisory Board for the City of Columbia.

Associate Dean Kenneth Dean has been appointed by Governor Ashcroft as a public member of the Missouri Sentencing Commission. The nine-member group will study and examine sentencing disparity among economic and social classes in death penalty cases, and study all other sentencing practices among the circuits in the state to determine if disparate treatment exists. The Commission will report annually with a final report in 1995. Dean Dean will spend the fall semester of 1991 teaching in the Law School's London Program. He will teach Evidence and Administrative Law. Students from MU and five other state law schools will spend the Fall attending regular law school classes at facilities on the University of London campus located in the heart of London, only a few blocks from the historic British Museum. Each year three of the six law schools in the consortium send a faculty member to teach. In addition, students take a course on British legal systems and have the opportunity to do clinical work in a barrister's office. This is the sixth year MU has participated in this program.

James R. Devine has completed his stint as Associate Circuit Court Judge for Iron County. Governor Ashcroft appointed him to complete the unexpired term of Judge Frank Mack from October 9 through December 31, 1990. After ten years of teaching, Jim found "the real world" a little unnerving but very challenging and exciting. He conducted numerous preliminary hearings, heard misdemeanor criminal cases, non-jury civil cases, small claims, divorces, probate matters, and actions under Missouri's Adult Abuse Act. He also served as Municipal Judge in Ironton, Pilot Knob, and Viburnum and was assigned by the Court Administrator's Office to hear cases in St. Louis County Associate Circuit Court for four days. Because the requirements of the Missouri Constitution prevented him from being paid by any other state agency except the judiciary, Jim was on leave of absence from the University but still met his classes in Columbia. Accordingly, he spent a fair percentage of his time commuting between Columbia and Ironton.

Professor Devine says he owes "a special debt to all of the people I met, but especially the two Associate Circuit Clerks, the Circuit Clerks in Ironton, the Sheriff's Department and all the lawyers. Without their help, I would not have been able to function." Professor Devine also recalls that the most pleasurable part of his experience was his chance to see many former students and to work with them on real, rather than hypothetical cases.

Carl H. Esbeck has a book review appearing in the Journal of Law and Religion of the book The First Freedom: Religion and the Bill of Rights (J. Wood editor, 1990). He presented a paper entitled "Charitable and Social Service Ministries of Religious Organizations: The First Amendment Consideration in Government Regulation in Programs of Assistance," at the University of Pennsylvania School of Law. This was part of a larger conference on the topic "Law and Religious Liberty." At the request of the chairperson of the Missouri House of Representatives Committee on Children, Youth and Family, he drafted House Bill 186. This bill addresses the matter of registration and regulation of child care centers operated by churches and other religious organizations. He has been working with a coalition of attorneys to draft the "Religious Freedom Restoration Act" for introduction in the 102nd Congress. If enacted this legislation will reverse the United States Supreme Court Case of Employment Division of Oregon v. Smith (1990). In January of 1991, he was reappointed to a three year term on the Legal Scholars Board of the Center for Church/State Studies, College of Law of DePaul University. The Center for Church/State Studies is a nonsectarian studies center for the exploration of issues concerning religious liberty.

David A. Fischer spoke on the recent developments in Evidence, Annual Survey of the Law at The Missouri Bar annual meeting October 4, 1990. The research that he has in progress is on causation in fact and products liability failure to warn cases. He serves as chair of the Academic Advisory Subcommittee of the Products, General Liability, and Consumer Law Committee of the Torts and Insurance Practice Section of the ABA. The subcommittee is comprised of 12 torts professors from around the country. It met August 6, 1990 in Chicago to help plan programs for future ABA meetings and is now undertaking a study of protective orders pertaining to discovery in civil litigation. The subcommittee met in Chicago February 22, 1991 to discuss this issue. He is a member of the Members Consultative Group for the American Law Institute project on Compensation and Liability for Product and Process Injuries. He attended meetings of the group on September 7-8, 1990 and February 1-2, 1991 in Philadelphia. He attended the seventy-seventh American Assembly at Arden House, Columbia University May 31-June 3, 1990. The topic of the Assembly was Tort Law and the Public Interest: Competition, Innovation, and Consumer Welfare.

William F. Fratcher has published the 1990 supplement to Scott on Trusts. He has now completed the 12-volume series of the 4th edition of Scott on Trusts which he has been preparing since 1986. He delivered a lecture entitled “Badges of Chivalry,” to the Columbia Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution and to the Columbia Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution. He also gave a talk entitled “Wills and Trusts,” to the UMC Retirees Association. He is presently working on a manuscript for the 1991 supplement to Scott on Trusts.

Dean Timothy J. Heinsz has arbitration awards entitled Sunoco Products and United Steel Workers of America, 95 L.A. 58 (1990) and Doe Run Co. and I.B.T., Local 688, 95 L.A. 705 (1990) published in the labor arbitration reports. He also attended an alumni reception in Washington, D.C. at the law office of Latham and Watkins during the January AALS meetings.

Nanette K. Laughrey has been awarded a Fulbright Lecturer Grant by the Council for the International Exchange of Scholars. Professor Laughrey will be lecturing and studying at the University of Linz in Austria during the Winter semester. While in Austria, Professor Laughrey will be teaching courses in American Civil Litigation and will be studying the Austrian legal system. She specifically plans to do a comparative study of Austrian and American civil litigation practices.

Grant Nelson presented the “Bankruptcy Update” at the Mortgage Lending Institute in St. Louis last November. He also presented a paper to the real estate section of the Oklahoma Bar Association entitled “Impact of Mortgagor Bankruptcy on the Real Estate Mortgagee.”

Philip Peters is currently drafting a provocative piece for Midwest Medical Ethics, in which he proposes that the Cruzan decision strongly suggests a third (middle)-tier of substantive due process analysis and that the weights of biomedical ethics and philosophy can help give coherence to this new test. In December, he gave a speech on legal issues at a symposium on "Medical Practice after Cruzan." On April 4 he participated in the forum entitled "Understanding the Cruzan Case," a conference sponsored by the Medical School. In addition, he will soon be presenting annual lectures at the Veterinary School on professional malpractice and for the Philosophy Department honors class on medical ethics.

James E. Westbrook presided over a hearing in the Law School Courtroom by the Missouri Task Force on Gender and Justice. The Committee is studying whether gender bias exists in Missouri Courts.

Professor Westbrook spoke on Missouri Public Sector Labor Law on February 28, 1991 at a program sponsored by Political Science Extension at MU. Professor Westbrook and Professor Riskin are preparing a supplement for their casebook, Dispute Resolution and Lawyers.

Dale Whitman spoke on "Prepayment Clauses in Mortgages" at the Commercial Real Estate Seminar in Kansas City on April 22, 1991. He also spoke at the Senior Law School Administrators Workshop in Washington, D.C. on March 1. The Workshop was sponsored by the Association of American Law Schools. His topic was building community among faculty. He has been named Chair of the Planning Committee for the Property Law Teachers Conference to be held in the summer of 1992. He served as Chair of the Campus Provost Search Committee. He is also serving as Chair of the Task Force of the Law School Admissions Council to study that organization's physical facility needs and ways of meeting them.

Opportunities for Giving

Contributions may be made to the School of Law in general or to any of its programs. All gifts are fully tax deductible as provided by law and may include:

♦ cash gifts
♦ gifts of stocks or other securities
♦ gifts in kind, meaning gifts of real or personal property
♦ deferred gifts, such as wills, bequests and trusts
♦ pledges of future gifts
♦ endowments, which are arrangements for use of investment income

Gifts may be designated for uses such as:
♦ faculty support, such as professorships and fellowships
♦ scholarships and student loans
♦ the law library
♦ faculty research
♦ the Missouri Law Review, Board of Advocates and the Center for the Study of Dispute Resolution
♦ equipment purchases and other physical needs
♦ unrestricted support to be used by the school at the dean's discretion.

There are many fund raising initiatives under way in the school that support specific areas. For additional information about donations to the Law School, please contact:
