THE UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI

The University of Missouri stands at the head of the educational system of the state. It was founded at Columbia in 1839, and instruction in academic work was begun in 1841. It is the oldest university west of the Mississippi River.

The work of the University is now carried on in the following colleges and schools: College of Arts and Science, College of Agriculture, School of Education, School of Law, School of Medicine, College of Engineering, School of Mines and Metallurgy, School of Journalism, School of Business and Public Administration, School of Fine Arts, Graduate School, Extension Division.

All divisions are at Columbia except the School of Mines and Metallurgy, which is at Rolla. Emphasis has been given particular lines of work by the establishment of minor divisions, the chief of which are the Agricultural Experiment Station, the Engineering Experiment Station and the Missouri State Military School.

The fundamental aim of the University is the development of the highest and most efficient type of citizen. The school is supported by the state and endeavors to return to the state practical service. Of late years extension courses, experiment farms and free literature on practical subjects have widely extended the University's influence.

The University grounds at Columbia cover more than 800 acres. The main divisions are the Francis Quadrangle, the East Campus, Rollins Field for athletics, and the University Farm.

Full information regarding the University is given in the catalog, a copy of which will be sent on request without charge.
